Profile

As a seasoned academic with a strong background in International Relations, I bring a wealth of expertise to the table. Holding a PhD in Political Science with a specialization in nuclear politics in the wider Middle East region and southwestern Asia, I have established myself as a leading authority in my field. My research has been widely recognized, with numerous publications in esteemed peer-reviewed journals. My research published in international journals, including Asian Journal of Comparative Politics, Chinese Political Science Review, Asian Politics and Policy, Quality and Quantity, Fudan Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences. With over a decade of experience as an Assistant Professor at Gomal University, D.I. Khan, I have had the privilege of guiding and mentoring students, supervising nine PhDs and over 70 M. Phil students. My academic tenure has equipped me with a deep understanding of the complexities of regional and global politics with focus on nuclear proliferation, disarmament and arms control, politics of the Middle East and south Asia, and the politics of corridor, and I am eager to leverage my expertise to contribute to the academic community at NDU Islamabad.
